Local nonprofit will ensure the bike safety of children

BOISE, Idaho – A free clinic will educate children on how to safely navigate a bike and provide them with necessary resources to stay safe in traffic.

Children in need will soon be able to learn about bicycle safety thanks to a clinic held by the Boise Bicycle Project. The event is on April 1 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

“With just a little guidance, children can learn habits and rules that could save their lives,” Hallyburton said. “We want them to enjoy bicycling as a sport they can continue into adulthood; and we want to make learning fun, so they will have a great time at our event.”

The clinic is free and all participants will receive a certificate of accomplishment after learning about good bicycle safety and completing an obstacle course to test their proficiency. The staff can repair any bike equipment that needs it or provide children with a free bike and helmet for those who do not own a bike.

Children are being educated in bicycle safety by the Boise Bicycle Project.

Safety is a top concern. Staff members and volunteers run the clinic and are all tested, masked and gloved to ensure safety of the children. The children will also be split into smaller groups to maintain social distance.

The Boise Bicycle Project is a local non-profit organization promoting personal, social, and environmental benefits of bicycling. For additional information and to reserve your spot at the clinic, visit: www.boisebicycleproject.org.
